don't know what that will do to my attitude on the fees, but I think this is a reasonable amendment and I would suggest that all of these city slickers...

SENATOR CUDABACK: One minute.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...and those who represent city slickers start paying attention to what the rural forces are doing. They need to be reminded that populations are shifting, and although I'm only going to have five more years, if I run again, if I win and if I survive, I'm going to do what I can to make that rural/urban split as stark as possible, and show city people that they'd better get what they can because the rural people have been looking only at rural issues. They put up a pitiful mouth when they want some support, but then they want to freeze the urbanites out whenever they can and the urbanites generally are so weak-kneed and lily-livered that they allow it to happen. Then they go home and cry during the whole interim about how the cities are being messed over. I support this amendment. I know Senator Smith is going to, too, because he is a semi-city slicker.

SENATOR CUDABACK: Thank you, Senator Chambers. Mr. Clerk, items?
